

		Yea 2	Yea
		3 compulsory modules delivered in English	3 compulsory modules
lela laP c SigeHi	Introduction to key institutions (both national and international) and issues that shape contemporary France. C150 Introduction to Cultural Studies (E) - Cultural Studies attempts to identify the common forms of experience and shared modes of understanding by which	POLP201 – Doing International Politics (2): Methods - 19th c. Marxists and positivists attacked idealism, laying the foundations for modern social sciences distrust of actors' own explanations for their behaviour. More recent authorities such as Pierre Bourdieu remained suspicious of 'biographical illusions'. This addresses a central question for political studies – the (in)signi cance of actors' own explanations for their actions – with a focus on how this a ects methods of doing international politics research.	POLP301 Doing Internal Practices - Many narrative claim each nation-state as a the methods used are often a through this paradox from a perspective. It will enable you and explain the emergence of and its dramatic extension to comparative nationalist munationalisms; similarities and African, Asian and Latin Amediering global responses to POLP202A Learning Lab: Field Experience (Sites) - The contemporary study of international politics recognises heterogeneous places where international politics happens. These places range from city streets and squares to internet platforms and are often intensi cation points for international politics. This module enables students to gain practical experience of how these various sites become potent points of international politics. POLP203 Sites of International Politics - This module makes the concept of site its prime academic instrument. It explores how sites of international politics - such as museums, streets, internet platforms, socio- political movements and NGOs amongst others - are implicated in the construction of global politics.	POLP302A Learning Lal (Practices) - The contempolitics recognises other activists for doing international activists, non-governmental and movements. This moduling gain practical experience of perform international politic students how to identify organd movements through what transmit practices from one cone generation to the next. POLP388 Research Projics designed to give students to agreed topic, under supervisivithin other modules. Students agreed topic and will be expindependent research communications.
		2 optional modules from the list	· ·
W Felc	societies and communities live.	2 optional modules from the list below starting with C2 optional modu	ess&fiting vitti2(2 option

Yea 3

compulsory modules delivered in English

DLP301 Doing International Politics (3) – actices - Many narratives of nationalist movements nim each nation-state as a unique formation, and yet e methods used are often similar. This module works rough this paradox from an international political rspective. İt will enable you to understand d explain the emergence of the nation-state form d its dramatic extension to the world. Topics include mparative nationalist music; mimetic diasporic tionalisms; similarities and di erences between rican, Asian and Latin American decolonisations; and ering global responses to the French Revolution.

DLP302A Learning Lab: Field Experience ractices) - The contemporary study of international litics recognises other actors than nations and ates for doing international politics such as artists, tivists, non-governmental organisations, collectives, d movements. This module enables students to in practical experience of how these various actors rform international politics. This module teaches idents how to identify organisations, institutions, d movements through which actors develop and insmit practices from one site to another and from DLP388 Research Project - The research project designed to give students the opportunity to study an reed topic, under supervision, to a greater depth than thin other modules. Students will select their own search topic and will be expected to develop a strong dependent research commitment. The research oject module encourages nal year students to take sponsibility for their own learning, with the guidance the supervisor.

pptional modules from the list below โก£iด@5ง/ithi2(2 optional m45709 -275 ref5(2 c